A Vote of Charity.

There is a government official now on duty in Washington whose face would close the doors of a beauty show with a snap before he could get within a mile of it, and yet he is not unhappy. On the contrary, he has a sunny nature that makes his face a flower garden all the year round. The only criticism that can be made of him is that he is as conceited about his homeliness as handsome men are about their beauty. That may be unusual, but it is true. The other day he was talking on the subject of his looks.

"Ten years or more ago," he said, "I was a candidate for congress in my state, with no show to win but plenty of extraneous in the good cause, I had been making a tour of the district, delivering speeches, and at one place I remained over night at a farmhouse in lieu of a tavern. I retired early, and about an hour later I heard the host and his wife come into their room, which adjoined mine, with a rather loosely hung door between the two apartments. I presume they thought I was asleep, because they talked along so I could very easily hear. I was not interested in their conversation, however, until they began to talk about me. It was general at first, and then it narrowed down to my personality, the woman arguing for me like a good fellow. At last she explained: 'Why, John, you owe it to the teaching of the Bible to vote for him and work for him, too.' John couldn't exactly see why, and I rose on my elbow to hear the line of argument. 'You do,' she explained, 'because you have no right to make his burden any heavier than the Lord made it in the first place. You ought to do all you can for a man with a face like his to make him forget it.'"

Washington Star.

A Few Smiles.

Missionary—The Lord has sent me. The Heathen—Didn't I tell you the Lord would provide for the feast. Joseph—What big words your sister uses. Willie—Yes, she does that when she's first introduced; she'll be all right after awhile.

Biggs—I hear that Henpeck has joined a polar expedition. Boggs—What does he expect to find? Biggs—Peace and happiness.

Johnny—Pa, does the sun ever set on the possessions of the United States? Pa—No, but a lot of trouble has been hatched in some of them.

Lillian—Marie, does your husband get vexed if you interrupt him when he's talking? Marie—No, but he gets furious if I interrupt him when he's eating or sleeping.

"Don't you think I write with a great deal of dash?" inquired the new woman reporter. "Yes," answered the cold-hearted editor, "and I'd much rather you would use commas and semi-colons."

Reporter—Your salary, I believe, is $250 a week. The Star—Well, one of them is. Reporter—One of them? The Star—Yes. The salary I advertise is $250 a week, but the salary I get—well, that's another story.

Jessie—Do you believe in ghosts? George—Yes, Louie told me the other day that I didn't have a ghost of a show to win you for my own, but I have refused to take his word for it. Jessie—George, you really must give me a little time to think before insisting that I name the day.

THE career of the successful pianist is like his hair—he prefers not to have it cut too short.

Reed Overruled.

At last Speaker Reed has been overruled. At a recent annual meeting of the Daughters of the Confederacy at Hot Springs, Ark., a lively dispute arose as to whether the minutes of the previous meeting should be read before business could proceed or not. One daughter ventured to question Speaker Reed on the subject, but she was promptly overruled and the reading dispensed with, on the motion of another daughter, who asserted vehemently that "Tom Reed didn't know what he was talking about."
